All Locked Up

No, it's not the new jail.
It's our new storage unit, to house the recently purchased display grids and sandwich boards, along with other seasonal / program items. Tucked neatly into the southwest corner of Big Blue next to the back door, the unit will allow easy access when transporting items to venues around town. This frees space up in the Studio Building office. Thanks to Barry Jeffery for construction.

New Year Reno Resolutions

January 8 at 1:00 p.m.

Quail's Nest Arts Centre

to prioritize the next few projects for the Quail's Nest.
Painting quail on the bay doors? Xeriscaping the garden?

Updating the electrical systems? Have your say!

A one-time gathering, to provide input to the Board.

Come dressed for a short outdoor tour, but most will be indoor discussion. No further commitment required!

Major projects will be contracted. Hot beverages provided. ALL welcome!

What fits YOUR schedule?

The arts council is always looking to match willing hands with work they enjoy. Data entry, graphic design, photography, info table greeter ...

Whether you're a social butterfly or prefer to stick close to home, we have something you can do! Some jobs are event-only, others are seasonal. Some may involve a few meetings, others are meeting-free. Here are a few possibilities that require no meetings: supplies purchaser, rental assistant (calendar data entry, occasional turnkey), membership (data entry).

Or join one of our seasonal committees. Music in the Park, for example, needs a new volunteer or two, requires only 4-5 meetings between February to June, puts you in contact with some great musicians, and has a well-documented committee info package. OliverCAC@gmail.com

Board

The council invites nominations to the Board. A few people are stepping off the Board this year, while others have already committed to standing for re-election. We anticipate a good mix of new and old. Besides four officers, the Board has between 4 and 8 directors.

New? No worries! Orientation is provided at the first meeting along with a binder and CD, and additional orientation is available. The Board meets once a month, and most members act as a representative to one committee to maintain good communication between board and committees.

Join a Board that is proud of the local arts, is business-like, works hard, and has proven results. Great for retirees or for someone looking to add community involvement to their resume. 250-498-3597

Spaced Out?

Enjoy a great workspace at a competitive price. Check out the Quail's Nest for your next function, whether for meetings, storefront, private party, art classes or workshops. Full kitchen, ample counter space, accessible washroom, large bays, optional market style (bay doors), plenty of tables and chairs.

Did you know the arts council also rents out some supplies to its members? Tables, chairs, grids, plinths, wine glasses, tablecloths, and more. Please note, these are rented based on your membership level (business use for business members, personal use for individual members).
